As a tech company, Updox needed a space that attracted top talent in the development arena. However, being a young company with a tight budget but an aggressive growth plan, LOTH creatively combined some of their existing furniture with new - allowing for choice + control in their working environment.

LOTH acquired partnership with Updox due to our team's responsiveness and attention to detail. Our design team was able to work within the specified budget, utilizing much of Steelcase's Turnstone line in the open work environment while providing a surplus of enclosed and open meeting spaces.

Feeding the Culture

Updox embraced their large cafe space and outdoor patio as a means of enhancing culture in the workplace. A custom-made island from Burl Mfg. is the pièce de résistance in the light-filled room. A mother's room is also provided and includes a wonderful view. The office's location itself is enticing being at the new Bridge Street development and is in itself a recruiting tool.

LOTH's SWS team played a critical role in the process - completing the move over the course of the weekend before the client took occupancy of the space. Their scope changed multiple times throughout the course of the engagement. Our ability to be flexible was key with the new build since issues with power placement arose and completion dates were moved back.
